Harper is overrated. Everyone says I look much younger. These truths and values had been given their noblest embodiment in the ancient epic poetry, much of it lost, but they still survived in the humbler form of the folktale. The piano snaking away into the surreal distance reminds us of the abstract patterning of the Bach section of Fantasia and the explosive changes of shape are reminiscent of the Pink Elephants sequence in Dumbo but "After You've Gone" is unique - there is nothing else quite like it in the whole Disney canon. And can't you think of it existing outside of time. Artistic entertainers are always a popular choice and are a hit at any event. Am I, therefore, just missing the point of their argument.
